It may be announced that the investigation did not result in the sensation which might have been expected from the amount of talk that has been indulged in concerning the charren. Indeed it will fall rather flat after the in in certain quarters. It is the old story of the mountain which brought forth a mouse Of theseven perons found there but one an Irishman, who had loat his eyesight, a pears in full possession of his mental facul

A WOMAN WITH A SAD HISTORY.

Mrs. Gorrell, widow of John G. Gorrell, who was a prominent citizen of the county in his life time, a member of the County Court, and Board of Supervisors, overseer of the county poor for Clay township, and keeper of the county poor for Clay township, and keeper of the county poor farm, on Wheeling Creek, although capable of giving intelligent replies to inquiries as to treatment, etc., was found to be evidently verging upon dotage, caused, no doubt, by infirm health, her sreatly changed condition in life and advancing age. Of the remaining five, two at least are bordering on idicey, and the others of very weak intellect.

The committee found that the greatest number ever contained in the institution was 24. The house contains but three rooms alloted to paupers, so that it will be seen that each of the three rooms, which are about 14 feet square, served for eight persons at the time 24 inmates were accomdated.

sons at the time 24 inmates were accomodated.

In reply to the inquiry as to whether they were given enough to eat the Irishman said in a hesitating sort of manner, "Yes, generally; some times meat is pretty scarce, and we never get any butter. We could sometimes eat more than is furnished us."

When asked what mode of punishment was employed to enforce obedience to the rules of the institution, the winess said, "That fellow," pointing to a young man of about 18 years of age, who is about equally distant between an idiot and a lunatic, "got a good switching one day for biting 'Lizs'."

L'zs' is a simple woman who has neer an inmate of the place for many years.

ONE OF THE SERIOUS CHARGES,

He said he was making up his bed, when several of the female inmates, who were sweeping and cleaning the room, persisted in "traing" him, when he caught one of them around the waist and gave her a "good square hug"—adding by way of apology for his unseemly conduct, that he was a "stout, hearty Irishman, and, barring the loss of his eys-sight, in full possession of all his natural faculties, failties and proclivities, and, air divid the bit av me could resist it." This, he asserted, was the full extent of his demonstration, and he "meant no harm to the gurral ton, and he "meant no harm to the gurral serted, was the full extent of his demonstration, and he 'meant no harm to the gurral atel, at all."

Mr. Rigss, the keeper, had been notified, however, of the proceedings going on, and arming himself with the wnip, came into the room and surprised Pat by applying it vigorously to his back.

Mrz. Gorrell did not complain of the treatment received, or the fare and clothing furnished her, yet her manner of replying to inquiries on the subject impressed the committee with the conviction that her answers were prompted by a Christian resignation to meekly accept whatever was tendered her. Mr. Ewing thinks that the keeper is somewhat to blame for not keeping Mrs. Gorrell's bed and hedding in better condition, as thestraw tick contains but very little filling, and besides the clothes were far from being clean. The committee saw but six beds in the house for the use of panpers, and scarcely any furniture of any description whatever. In regard to the absence of the keeper and family on the Sunday that Mr. Evans united the piace, it was developed that the family no person except the paupers in change of the house, but that the keeper's daughter, of woman's age, returned and prepared dimer for the inmates. the house, but that the keeper's daughter, of woman's age, returned and prepared diner for the inmates. Mr. Riggs and his wife did not return until evening. This, of course, was a very reprehensible thing for the keeper to do, as owing to the mental condition of most of the inmates, had a fire occurred at the house during the absence of the family, it certainly would have been destroyed, as they are incapable of making the least effort toward extinguishing a fire.

One day last week, the family of Mr. Josep One dy last weak, the tamily of art. Joseph Themas, superintendent of the Consolidated company's mine at Frostburg, ate canned corn beel. Shortly af erward six of the tamily, who partook of the meat, were all taken violently ill, with symptoms of polsoning, and continued so during the night. At one time two of them were in great danger, but at least accounts they were all out of one time two or treat when a great unage, but at last accounts, they were all out of langer. Mr. Thomas and two sons, who were not home for dinner, escaped. It is suppose-tibut the persons taken sick were all poisoned by eating the meat, and it is presumed the mischief was caused by the material of which he can way unde

Embrace the Last Opportunity.

That master-piece of automatic mechanism, Bergmann's life-like representation of a beautiful Swiss city, will remain on exhibition a few days longer for the benefit of all lovers of artistic inventions. It is indeed a work whose merits cannot be exaggerated by the most fisterings descriptions. Criticism absolutely fails to find a single feature in this elaborate temple of consummate mechanical science where it can "deat in its." chanical science where it can get in the work." This last opportunity to see the greatest marvel of the nineteenth century should be improved by sever man, woman and child in Wheeling and its vicinity.
